screensaver.[Study on the effect of fluoride on dental caries]. Dental caries caused by Streptococcus mutans remains to be the most common oral disease of man. Since several decades it has been suggested that fluoride plays an important role in the prevention of dental caries, and recently it was concluded from epidemiological and clinical studies that the level of fluoride intake recommended by the WHO is adequate to reduce caries. However, little is known on the cellular and molecular basis of its effect on Streptococcus mutans. We analyzed the effect of fluoride in the biological activities of S. mutans cells, which include bacterial morphogenesis, adhesion, and biofilm formation, using various substrates. Our findings suggest that fluoride can prevent bacterial cell adhesion and biofilm formation on saliva-coated hydroxyapatite and hydroxyapatite, but not on polystyrene or saliva-coated polystyrene.

Q: Delete oldest elements of a vector I want to delete the oldest elements of a vector, i.e. delete the elements from the start, so that the vector is the length of the biggest number in the vector. I have already tried to make a for loop that does it, but it works only for one specific number. I was wondering whether there is a more elegant way to do it? A: A typical way to do this is using std::pop_heap: #include #include using std::vector; int main() { vector vec = {10,20,30,40,50,60,70}; sort(vec.begin(), vec.end()); vector result; std::pop_heap(vec.begin(), vec.end(), [&result](int lhs, int rhs) { return result.back() /* SDL - Simple DirectMedia Layer Copyright (C) 1997-
