numberDirectors and cinematographers Media I don't know if the actor Fabio Fazio can laugh, but I'm sure he can cry. Last year, Fazio, who plays a doctor in the 2001 neo-noir A Kiss Before Dying (above), also directed that movie and more than a few that came before it. He was on board last year's The Girl Who Played With Fire, his first outing as a director, and he's back for the new Rossellini Crime series, which starts tonight on Amazon (and on Netflix next week). I met up with Fazio in Washington Square Park to discuss. The interview has been edited for length and clarity. You were the first to direct a film in the Rossellini series, but there's a certain irony to having your first gig be on a TV series. It's not just about the TV series. I was in the movie business before and [in 2014 I made] a movie for Netflix with Roberto Benigni called A Is For Apple, which was the U.S. premiere of my film. It was good to have the freedom to make the movie, so it was exciting to be on the TV series too. But also, it gives
