Arizona Department of Corrections under the oversight of the Arizona Board of Pardons and Paroles has been identified in a review report. The quarterly report titled "Rendering a Glance at the Board of Pardons and Parole" was released Monday by the Arizona Auditor General. The report said the agency often has been "operating within a framework of serious financial deficiencies," and the problems "have existed for several years." With credit for the report, "The biggest problem appears to be that the agency lacks a documented policies and procedures in place to address the problems that are identified," according to the report. "The Department has been working to implement best management practices and corrective action plans related to the recommendations identified in the report," the agency said in a written response to the report. The Auditor General found little evidence of improvements within the agency in the last three years. The report calls for major changes in the parole board's decision-making process. Auditor General Daniel K. Daniel said the problems at the DOC have been "endemic." The review of the agency concluded at least the following: Possible violations of the Arizona Open Meetings Act, according to a statute

The number of studies assessing the rectus abdominis muscle in humans is small. Although the multifidus muscle and the erector spinae muscle are believed to be equally effective in providing stability of the trunk, there has been no formal evaluation of the latter muscle in the literature. The primary purpose of this study was to measure the fatigue resistance and reproducibility of the rectus abdominis muscle with a specially designed intra-rectal pressure catheter. A further aim was to investigate the differences in fatigue resistance between the left and right rectus abdominis muscle. This study was carried out on five healthy subjects (four females and one male, mean age 25 yr, range 21-28) who participated voluntarily in the study. The catheters were inserted transversely into the posterior aspect of the rectus abdominis muscle and were connected to a portable data acquisition system capable of recording intra-abdominal pressure during an isometric voluntary contraction of the rectus abdominis muscle at 30 degrees and 70 degrees of hip flexion. The fatigue resistance and reproducibility of the rectus abdominis muscle at 30 degrees of hip flexion were significantly different between right and left sides (P Animal Health Products of America The Animal Health Products of America (AHPOA) is a trade organization for large and small animal pharmaceutical companies.
