■ PREMIUM FEATURE [Silent, I Am Unknown] ♦ The Story of Tarnished Knight The Story of Tarnished Knight It was a peaceful dawn on the first day of Spring. The sun rose in the east as the first rays of dawn filtered through the morning fog. The sun rose just as the first rays of dawn broke through the morning fog, and a gust of wind blew in. The trees swayed in the breeze. The glistening water sparkled brightly in the morning sun. It was the first day of the rest of his life. Since he began his journey to the above-ground world, the Tarnished Knight traveled across the lands. Although it was still a long time to go, he made it to the places beyond his hometown. The places that he'd dreamt of in his youth. ...He was just a young man to the world, but no one expected him to be so tough... With his heart filled with courage, he continued on, despite the never-ending dangers... He crossed dangerous deserts, bludgeoning forests, and pocked mountains. He had no time to rest, even when he ran out of water and food. He continued on even after being struck down by bandits, injured by falling boulders, and being nearly stepped on by wild animals. He did not turn his back on these threats, nor did he rely on others, wandering across the lands. The dragon emblem, which he received as his birthright, was the sign that he was born to survive. The Tarnished Knight continued on without knowing anything about it. It was the first day of the rest of his life. This is how the large tombstone atop a hill reached the west coast. The tombstone read: A Tarnished Knight, the Tarnished Knight, the Tarnished Knight, the Tarnished Knight. The Tarnished Knight, who took on the name Tarnished and lived in an underground town. The Tarnished Knight, who wandered across the lands. The Tarnished Knight, who took on the name Tarnished and lived in an underground town. As the cold wind blew across his face, he could feel the yearning in his heart. The yearning to meet someone, to smile, to love, to live. It was a yearning that he had never before felt. bff6bb2d33

An Imperialist Tale - 1942 - You know how it is, dating back to the days of the two-dollar Howard out of RKO, 'peace' has never been an easy word to come by. From the dust and tumult of the trenches to the glittering heights of victory, a look at some of the highly successful campaigns that saw worldwide Imperial rule come to an end. In the 1941 attack on Pearl Harbor, Japanese forces surprised the U.S. military, sinking two of the five U.S. battleships and inflicting severe damage on a third. Inspired by the attack and eager to strike back, President Roosevelt declared war on Japan in December of that year. The first major Pacific campaign began on February 4, 1942, and would last more than four years and cost more than a quarter of a million lives, as the United States battles a wide range of Japanese military personnel and projects in islands from Manila to Okinawa. Documentaries on World War II generally focus on the military conflicts

Q: C++: Stream of ints to Vector - Exception not caught in debug mode I've defined a class containing a vector, but when I try to insert data through the stream operator I don't manage to catch the exception. The methods for inserting and deleting data works fine, but the one with the stream operator is not catching the exception. Any hints? `void CSchedule::AddItem(int itemCount, int interval) { try { vector::iterator i = _items.begin(); while (i != _items.end()) { i = _items.insert(i, itemCount, interval); printf("%d`

-> %d ", i, _items.end()); } } catch (const exception& e) {
printf("Caught: %s ", e.what()); } }

When I uncomment the first line and move the printf to the try block the output is: Caught: attempt to insert a value at an out-of-range position in "int" But the thing that is bothering me is that the code actually should work. I mean, when I uncomment that line and use the above-mentioned code it works fine. But when I comment it out and do the same I get the exception thrown. Thanks in advance!

A: The problem you had was that the inner loop was skipping to the end of the collection, and inserting values there, which was not allowed. When you enabled the inner loop, it inserted the values starting from the first element, which is what you expect.
