Put your favourite online store at your fingertips with the browser and app for BlackBerry 10.Q: How do I handle feedback on this question? A certain section of our community gets pissed when people call them out on their incorrect teachings. I recently asked a question where I just want to come to the table as a newbie and ask about some overall concepts. I asked the question knowing the lesson leaders were going to be upset because they would feel I was casting them as a bad leader when I just wanted to learn their insights. In the question, I was very upfront about my ignorance. I asked questions where I just want to start out right, gain more knowledge, and continue to grow in the church. When I posted that question, I didn't think anyone would point out my mistakes. I can see how people are going to be defensive and want to bash me on the subject. My question is: how do I handle this feedback? I shouldn't blindly accept criticism? Do I ignore it as "he doesn't know much," or is it acceptable to point out where I am going wrong? It would be acceptable to say "don't follow his cult-like teaching (I'm aware that the teaching is inclusive), but it would be really hurtful to me if you point out my mistakes and say I'm stupid because I don't know anything and have an incorrect understanding. In other words, how do I handle this feedback constructively? A: The response I'd personally want to give to criticism like this from some of our more "
